BEFORE THE OFFICE OF DISCIPLINARY COUNSEL

COMMISSION ON PRACTICE

ODC FILE NO. 25-147

IN RE:

GRIEVANCE AGAINST

BRYAN C. TIPP

REQUEST FOR REVIEW

Date: November 18, 2025

Submitted by:
Elvis Ryland Nuno
[redacted]
Email: contact@elvis-legal.8shield.net

CONTENTS

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES 6

1 PROCEDURAL BASIS FOR REQUEST 1

2 CASE SUMMARY: A CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS DEMANDING CORRECTION 2

2.1 The Core Issue ODC Failed to Address 2

2.2 The Devastating Quantifiable Harm and Institutional Beneficiaries 3

2.3 The Standard That Applies 4

3 WHY THIS COMPLAINT TRANSCENDS INDIVIDUAL HARM: THE CHILLING EFFECT ON CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS 5

3.1 ODC's Dismissal Ratifies Constitutional Rights as Bargaining Chips 5

3.2 The Practical Impact on Future Criminal Defendants 5

3.3 The Nullification of "Inalienable Rights" 6

3.4 The Institutional Capture Problem 7

3.5 The Precedent for Other Constitutional Rights 8

3.6 The Chilling Effect on Institutional Accountability 8

3.7 Why "Eventually Dismissed" Is Not a Defense 9

4 THE 18-MONTH DELAY BENEFITTED PROSECUTION AND YWCA, NOT CLIENT 10

4.1 What 18 Months of Investigation Revealed: Absolutely Nothing 10

4.2 What a Trial Would Have Exposed 11

4.2.1 Detective Smith's Corruption: 11

4.2.2 Detective Brueckner's YWCA Conflict: 11

4.2.3 Prosecution's Reliance on Speculation: 12
4.2.4 E'Lise's Complete Lack of Evidence: 12
4.2.5 Judge Warren's Prior Ruling: 12
4.3 How the Deferred Prosecution Agreement Benefitted These Parties 13
4.4 The Alternative That Served MY Interests 14

5 CORRECTING ODC'S FUNDAMENTAL MISCHARACTERIZATIONS 17
5.1 Mischaracterization #1: "This Is About Whether Tipp Was Retained for Civil Representation" 17
5.2 The Distinction That Matters 17
5.2.1 Competent Limited Representation: 17
5.2.2 What Mr. Tipp Actually Said: 18
5.3 Why the "Scope of Representation" Argument Is Legally Incorrect 18

6 DETAILED EVIDENCE OF ETHICAL VIOLATIONS 20
6.1 Rule 1.1 (Competence): The 18-Month Delay and Failure to Investigate . . . 20
6.1.1 Timeline Demonstrating Incompetence 20
6.1.2 The Detective Brueckner Conflict: Failure to Investigate 20
6.2 Rule 1.3 (Diligence): Active Suppression of Civil Claims Information 21
6.2.1 The "Give It Time" Advice 21
6.2.2 The 17 Documented Harassment Incidents (May 2020–August 2022) . 22
6.2.3 The Legally Baseless "Retaliation Appearance" Argument 23
6.3 Rule 1.4 (Communication): Failure to Ensure Understanding of Critical Deadlines 23
6.3.1 What Adequate Communication Requires 23
6.3.2 Why "Find Other Counsel" Plus "Civil Suit Will Harm Defense" Is Inadequate 25

6.4 Rule 1.7 (Conflict of Interest): Divided Loyalties 25
6.4.1 The Constitutional Rights as Bargaining Chip Problem 25
6.4.2 The Institutional Loyalty Problem 26
6.4.3 The "Civil Litigation Will Harm Defense" Fabrication 26
6.5 Rule 8.4(c) — Dishonesty, Fraud, Deceit, or Misrepresentation 27

7 COMPREHENSIVE CASE PRECEDENT: ATTORNEYS DISCIPLINED FOR SIMILAR OR LESSER MISCONDUCT 29

7.1 Montana Disciplinary Precedent: Seven-Month Suspensions 29
7.1.1 Attorney Who Failed to File Timely Appeal 29
7.1.2 Attorney Who Missed Statute of Limitations Deadline 29
7.1.3 Attorney Who Failed to Investigate Case Merits 29
7.2 National Case Law: Attorney Discipline for Statute Failures 29
7.2.1 In re Morin, 408 N.W.2d 574 (Minn. 1987) 29
7.2.2 Legal Malpractice Verdict: Doe v. Doe Law Firm — $3 Million Settlement 30
7.2.3 Superior Court Reverses $3.28M Malpractice Verdict (Pennsylvania) . 30
7.2.4 Attorney Discipline for Plea Bargain Violations 30
7.3 Ethics Opinions: Constitutional Rights in Plea Negotiations 31
7.3.1 Nebraska Ethics Advisory Opinion No. 13-04 31
7.3.2 ABA Resolution 113E 31
7.3.3 Deterring Constitutional Accountability as Ethical Violation 32
7.4 Comparative Analysis: Tipp vs. Montana Precedent 32

8 WHY THE 18-MONTH DELAY DEMONSTRATES MISCONDUCT, NOT STRATEGY 34

8.1 The Timeline Proves Delay Was Unjustified 34

8.2 The Harm from Delay 35

8.3 Montana Precedent: Delays Without Justification Warrant Suspension . . . 35

9 THE "DEFERRED PROSECUTION AGREEMENT" ISSUE: TRADING RIGHTS AS BARGAINING CHIPS 36

9.1 Why This Violates Professional Conduct 36

9.2 Legal Authority: Attorneys Cannot Negotiate Constitutional Rights Waivers 36

9.2.1 Supreme Court — Perry v. Sindermann, 408 U.S. 593 (1972) 36

9.2.2 Nebraska Ethics Opinion & ABA Guidance 36

9.3 The "Rights vs. Privileges" Problem 37

10 ODC'S ANALYTICAL ERRORS REQUIRING REVERSAL 38

10.1 Error #1: Applying "Criminal Case Outcome" as Sole Competence Metric . 38

10.2 Error #2: Ignoring Active Misinformation vs. Mere Omission 38

10.3 Error #3: Conflating "Informed Client" with "Client Who Sought Other Counsel" 40

10.4 Error #4: Misapplying Hindsight Bias Standard 40

11 THE PUBLIC INTEREST REQUIRES DISCIPLINE 42

11.1 Deterrence of Future Misconduct 42

11.2 Protection of Vulnerable Clients 42

11.3 Maintaining Public Confidence in the Legal Profession 43

12 REQUESTED RELIEF AND SANCTIONS 44

12.1 Authorize Formal Investigation 44

12.2 Impose Sanctions Consistent with Montana Precedent 45

12.3 Establish Precedent Protecting Constitutional Rights 46

13 CONCLUSION: THE LEGAL PROFESSION'S INTEGRITY IS AT STAKE 48

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE 49

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

Haddle v. Garrison, 525 U.S. 121 (1998) 29

In re Morin, 408 N.W.2d 574 (Minn. 1987) 26

Jones v. Trump, No. 1:23-cv-03773 (S.D.N.Y.) 29

Perry v. Sindermann, 408 U.S. 593 (1972) 32

Statutes

42 U.S.C. § 1983 ..... passim

Rules

Mont. R. for Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement Rule 10C(3) 4

Mont. R. for Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement Rule 14 4

Mont. R. Prof. Conduct 1.1 (Competence) 19

Mont. R. Prof. Conduct 1.3 (Diligence) 20

Mont. R. Prof. Conduct 1.4 (Communication) 22

Mont. R. Prof. Conduct 1.7 (Conflict of Interest) 23

Mont. R. Prof. Conduct 8.4(c) (Dishonesty) 25

Other Authorities

ABA Resolution 113E 28

Nebraska Ethics Advisory Opinion No. 13-04 27

Public Case Archive Available At https://ywcaofmissoula.com .....

1. PROCEDURAL BASIS FOR REQUEST

Pursuant to Montana Rules for Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement Rule 10C(3) and Rule 14, I hereby submit this timely written request for review of the Office of Disciplinary Counsel's dismissal of my grievance against attorney Bryan C. Tipp, as communicated in ODC's letter dated November 3, 2025. This request is filed within the 30-day deadline specified in your dismissal letter.

I respectfully request that a Review Panel of the Commission on Practice review ODC's determination that "this matter does not warrant disciplinary action" and reverse the dismissal. The basis for this request is set forth below.

This request also includes critical information and comprehensive legal analysis that demonstrates how Mr. Tipp's specific advice that filing civil claims could "appear retaliatory" and potentially harm my criminal defense constitutes active misinformation, not passive scope limitation, and establishes multiple ethical violations warranting formal investigation and discipline.

2. CASE SUMMARY: A CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS DEMANDING CORRECTION

2.1 The Core Issue ODC Failed to Address

ODC's dismissal fundamentally mischaracterizes this complaint as a "scope of representation" dispute about whether Mr. Tipp was "retained to pursue civil claims." This complaint has never been about scope of representation—a point I made repeatedly in both my initial complaint and my response. Mr. Tipp has attempted to redirect the complaint toward this false narrative to avoid accountability for his actual misconduct.

The actual complaint concerns three distinct ethical violations:

1. Active Suppression of Critical Information: Mr. Tipp repeatedly advised my family and me to "give it time" regarding civil action, while knowing that civil rights statutes of limitations were expiring during his representation, yet deliberately failing to ensure I understood the urgency and irreversibility of these deadlines. Most critically, Mr. Tipp explicitly warned that filing civil claims could "appear retaliatory" and possibly harm my criminal defense—advice that is legally false and designed to deter constitutional accountability litigation.

2. Unjustified 18-Month Delay That Benefited Institutions Over Client: Mr. Tipp could have—and should have—obtained dismissal of the criminal charges within weeks or months, given that Judge Warren had already ruled my YWCA complaint was protected speech. Instead, he delayed 18 months and ultimately traded my First Amendment rights as a bargaining chip in a deferred prosecution agreement. This outcome validated the prosecution's and YWCA's narrative despite 18 months producing zero evidence supporting E'Lise Chard's extreme claims.

3. Refusal to Provide Basic Professional Advocacy: Despite being repeatedly informed of ongoing harassment and civil rights violations by the YWCA, Missoula PD, and their associates—harassment that continued throughout and after his representation—Mr. Tipp characterized himself as "generally disinclined" to provide any advocacy or referrals, leaving me without recourse while constitutional violations continued.

2.2 The Devastating Quantifiable Harm and Institutional Beneficiaries

Mr. Tipp's misconduct caused $6.4–8.4 million in time-barred civil rights claims, including:

- 2015 Edmonds SWAT Excessive Force (42 U.S.C. § 1983): Statute expired November 2018 during Mr. Tipp's representation
- 2018 First Amendment Retaliation (42 U.S.C. § 1983): Statute expired May 2021 shortly after his representation
- Medical Malpractice (Dr. Marta Miranda): Statute expired 2019–2020 during his representation
- Prior Attorney Malpractice (Patricia Fulton): Statute expired 2019–2020 during his representation

However, Mr. Tipp's chosen resolution benefitted different parties entirely:

Who benefitted from the deferred prosecution agreement:

- Prosecution: Avoided trial embarrassment after 18 months produced no evidence supporting stalking charges
- YWCA: My public complaint was removed, silencing institutional accountability
- E'Lise Chard: Her extreme, unfounded claims were effectively validated rather than exposed

Who was harmed:

- Elvis Nuno: Constitutional rights traded away, civil claims time-barred, ongoing harassment unaddressed
- Public: Dangerous precedent that constitutional rights are negotiable commodities

2.3 The Standard That Applies

Montana disciplinary precedent establishes 7-month suspensions for attorneys who:

- Fail to file timely appeals
- Miss statute of limitations deadlines
- Fail to investigate case merits
- Fail to communicate adequately with clients

Mr. Tipp's conduct is demonstrably more serious because it involved:

- Multiple statute deadline failures across multiple potential claims
- Active misinformation ("civil suit will harm defense") rather than mere omission
- Trading constitutional rights in plea negotiations
- 18-month unjustified delay that benefitted institutions, not client
- Quantified damages exceeding $6 million

3. WHY THIS COMPLAINT TRANSCENDS INDIVIDUAL HARM: THE CHILLING EFFECT ON CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS

3.1 ODC's Dismissal Ratifies Constitutional Rights as Bargaining Chips

If ODC's dismissal stands, it sends an unmistakable message to every Montana attorney:

> "You may use your client's constitutional rights as bargaining chips in criminal proceedings. You may trade First Amendment protections, Fifth Amendment due process rights, and other fundamental freedoms to expedite case resolution. You may affirmatively warn clients that exercising constitutional rights will harm them, thereby chilling protected speech. Such conduct will face no disciplinary consequences."

This is not theoretical harm. ODC's dismissal creates binding precedent within Montana's disciplinary system that:

1. Validates the practice of negotiating away constitutional rights
2. Immunizes attorneys from discipline for such conduct
3. Authorizes affirmative misrepresentation to deter constitutional claims
4. Encourages future constitutional rights trading as "acceptable strategy"
5. Transforms "inalienable rights" into conditional privileges

3.2 The Practical Impact on Future Criminal Defendants

Consider the attorney-client conversation that ODC's dismissal authorizes:

Attorney: "The prosecutor is willing to drop charges if you agree to never publicly criticize the institution that falsely accused you. You'll need to remove your complaint from the internet and stay silent for a year. If you refuse, you face years in prison."

Client: "But don't I have First Amendment rights? The judge already said my complaint was protected speech."

Attorney: "Technically yes, but those rights are negotiable. We can trade them for your freedom. Filing a civil suit now could appear retaliatory and may harm your criminal defense. The Montana disciplinary system has confirmed this is acceptable legal practice."

Client: "What if I want to fight on principle?"

Attorney: "That's your choice, but remember: exercising constitutional rights increases your sentence if convicted. Rights are only 'rights' if you don't need to use them."

This conversation should horrify us. ODC's dismissal makes it standard practice.

3.3 The Nullification of "Inalienable Rights"

The Declaration of Independence and constitutional tradition recognize certain rights as "inalienable"—meaning they cannot be surrendered, sold, or traded away.

Yet ODC's dismissal ratifies the following practice:

Inalienable Rights Framework	ODC-Approved Reality
First Amendment rights are fundamental	First Amendment rights are negotiable if prosecution demands it
Constitutional protections apply equally	Constitutional protections apply only to those who don't exercise them
Rights cannot be conditioned on silence	Rights can be traded for prosecutorial leniency
Courts protect constitutional freedoms	Courts defer to attorneys who bargain them away
Defense counsel zealously defend rights	Defense counsel trade rights to expedite resolution

If rights can be traded away under threat of imprisonment, they are not "rights" at all—they are privileges enjoyed only by those who never need to assert them.

3.4 The Institutional Capture Problem

Mr. Tipp's conduct reveals a deeper problem: defense attorneys serving institutional interests rather than client interests.

Evidence of Institutional Loyalty Over Client Loyalty:

1. Refused to investigate Detective Brueckner's YWCA conflict despite material importance (Tipp's own words)
2. Negotiated removal of protected speech rather than challenging prosecutorial overreach
3. Characterized as "generally disinclined" to provide advocacy against institutional actors
4. Prioritized case resolution over constitutional accountability
5. Achieved outcome benefitting institutions (prosecution, YWCA, E'Lise) over client

Mr. Tipp's warning that civil litigation may "harm my defense" served institutional interests, not mine. By deterring me from pursuing § 1983 claims against Missoula PD, YWCA, and prosecutors, Tipp ensured that:

- Detective Brueckner's YWCA board conflict would never be exposed in depositions
- YWCA's institutional failures would not be documented in discovery
- Prosecutors would avoid accountability for relying on compromised investigations
- Law enforcement would face no constitutional limitations on similar future conduct

This advice transformed Tipp from my advocate into an institutional gatekeeper—precisely the conflict this section identifies.

If ODC allows this conduct, Montana's criminal defense bar becomes an extension of prosecutorial power rather than a check on it.

3.5 The Precedent for Other Constitutional Rights

If First Amendment rights are negotiable, what about:

- Fourth Amendment protections against unreasonable search/seizure? "Waive your right to challenge the illegal search, and we'll reduce charges."
- Fifth Amendment due process rights? "Don't raise your due process violations, and we'll recommend probation."
- Sixth Amendment right to counsel? "Waive your ineffective assistance claims, and we'll support early release."
- Eighth Amendment protections against cruel punishment? "Don't complain about jail conditions, and we'll drop the enhancement."

ODC's dismissal doesn't just affect First Amendment cases—it authorizes trading ANY constitutional protection for prosecutorial favor.

3.6 The Chilling Effect on Institutional Accountability

When attorneys trade away protected speech as a condition of case resolution, they create a system where:

1. Victims of institutional misconduct cannot speak publicly without criminal consequences
2. Whistleblowers face prosecution for exposing corruption, then face pressure to recant
3. Public accountability becomes impossible when criticism triggers criminal liability
4. Institutions wield criminal prosecution as a weapon against critics
5. Defense counsel become complicit in silencing legitimate grievances

My YWCA complaint was protected speech addressing institutional misconduct. Judge Warren confirmed this. Yet I was forced to remove it and stay silent for a year to avoid years in prison.

If this is acceptable, then NO critic of powerful institutions is safe.

3.7 Why "Eventually Dismissed" Is Not a Defense

ODC suggests that because my criminal case was "eventually dismissed," Mr. Tipp provided competent representation. This reasoning fails catastrophically.

The problem is not dismissal—it's HOW dismissal was achieved and WHO benefitted:

Tipp's Actual Resolution	What Competent Counsel Would Have Achieved
18-month delay while statutes expired	Immediate motion to dismiss based on Judge Warren's ruling
Traded First Amendment rights	Protected constitutional rights while achieving dismissal
Required removal of protected speech	Challenged prosecutorial overreach on constitutional grounds
Validated prosecution/YWCA narrative	Exposed baseless charges through swift dismissal
Benefitted institutions, not client	Achieved dismissal demonstrating innocence and protecting civil claims
No accountability for false accusations	Positioned client for civil rights recovery

"Eventually dismissed" after trading constitutional rights and time-barring civil claims is NOT competent representation—it's institutional capture dressed as criminal defense.

4. THE 18-MONTH DELAY BENEFITTED PROSECUTION AND YWCA, NOT CLIENT

4.1 What 18 Months of Investigation Revealed: Absolutely Nothing

The prosecution's charging documents made extreme claims about me:

E'Lise Chard's Allegations (Prosecution's Narrative):

- I was a violent threat to her, her children, YWCA employees, and the community
- I was "running from the law" and believed the law didn't apply to me
- I had stalked her for years using sophisticated technical methods
- I posed an ongoing danger justifying GPS monitoring and $50,000 bail

After 18 Months, Prosecution's Evidence Showed:

1. Overreaching Search of Home/Work Equipment: No mention of E'Lise found
2. Forensic Analysis of Facebook Data: No evidence of contact or intent
3. Investigation of "Multiple Phone Numbers" Theory: No proof of technical sophistication claims
4. Witness Testimony: E'Lise never provided evidence supporting extreme claims
5. Relationship Evidence: E'Lise never proved we were anything but complete strangers
6. Intent Evidence: No evidence whatsoever that I intended or wanted any contact with her

The charging documents specifically relied on:

- Detective Ethan Smith's compromised investigation (later removed from case for misconduct)

- Speculation that I used "Guerrilla Mail" and "Pinger" services (requiring "advanced technical knowledge"—demonstrably false)
- Claims that messages from "multiple phone numbers were structured in a similar manner"—pure speculation with no expert analysis
- Allegations that my parents told Smith I had "mental health issues" and "multiple cell phones"—both parents explicitly deny this conversation ever occurred 18 months of investigation revealed these allegations to be completely unfounded.

4.2 What a Trial Would Have Exposed

Had Mr. Tipp moved for immediate dismissal and forced the prosecution to trial, the following would have been exposed:

4.2.1 Detective Smith's Corruption:

- Personal relationship with E'Lise creating irreconcilable conflict
- Fabricated statements attributed to my parents
- Removed from case by commanding officer for misconduct
- Used in charging documents despite known compromise

4.2.2 Detective Brueckner's YWCA Conflict:

- Served on YWCA Board of Directors while investigating YWCA employee's complaints against me
- Material Brady violation
- Mr. Tipp admits this was "material and potentially cast doubt on the investigation"
- Yet Mr. Tipp never investigated or challenged it

4.2.3 Prosecution's Reliance on Speculation:

- No forensic evidence connecting me to alleged harassment
- No expert testimony supporting "similar manner" theory
- Technical sophistication claims demonstrably false
- Circular reasoning: "It sounds like Elvis, therefore it must be Elvis"

4.2.4 E'Lise's Complete Lack of Evidence:

- Never established we had any relationship
- Never provided evidence of "violent threat"
- Never proved intent to contact
- Never substantiated years-long stalking narrative

4.2.5 Judge Warren's Prior Ruling:

- Already determined my YWCA complaint was protected speech
- Already ruled it did not violate protection order
- Prosecution's relitigation of protected speech = abuse of process

A trial would have been an embarrassment for:

- Prosecution (baseless charges exposed)
- E'Lise Chard (extreme claims revealed as false)
- YWCA (institutional misconduct would be publicly aired)
- Detective Smith (corruption on full display)
- Detective Brueckner (conflict of interest exposed)

4.3 How the Deferred Prosecution Agreement Benefitted These Parties

Instead of exposing this misconduct through trial or swift dismissal, Mr. Tipp negotiated an outcome that served everyone's interests EXCEPT mine:

Prosecution Benefitted:

- Avoided public trial exposing 18 months of failed investigation
- Avoided judicial findings that charges were baseless
- Avoided Brady violation exposure (Detective Smith/Brueckner)
- Avoided accountability for relying on compromised investigation
- Maintained narrative that charges had merit (hence "deferred prosecution" vs. "dismissed")

E'Lise Chard Benefitted:

- Her extreme, unfounded claims were never tested or challenged
- No public exposure of false allegations
- No cross-examination revealing lack of evidence
- Narrative of "victim" status preserved

YWCA Benefitted:

- My silence ensured for 12 months (can't defend myself publicly)
- My public complaint removed from internet
- Institutional misconduct silenced
- Detective Brueckner conflict never exposed
- Public accountability avoided

- Narrative control maintained

Mr. Tipp Benefitted:

- Quick case resolution without substantive litigation
- Avoided challenging powerful institutional actors
- Maintained professional relationships with prosecutors
- No uncomfortable constitutional litigation
- Case "resolved" without rocking the boat

Elvis Nuno Was Harmed:

- Constitutional rights traded away
- Civil statute deadlines expired (18 months of delay)
- Public complaint removed (12 months of silence)
- Unable to defend reputation publicly
- Ongoing harassment unaddressed
- $6.4–8.4M in civil claims time-barred
- Prosecution/YWCA narrative validated rather than exposed

4.4 The Alternative That Served MY Interests

What competent, zealous advocacy would have looked like:

Immediately Upon Retention (June 2018):

1. File Emergency Motion to Dismiss based on:
    - Judge Warren's prior ruling that YWCA complaint was protected speech

- First Amendment bars prosecution for protected advocacy
- Prosecutorial abuse of process (relitigating adjudicated conduct)

2. Motion to Suppress All Evidence from compromised investigation:
   - Detective Smith's conflict of interest and removal from case
   - Brady violations (non-disclosure of Smith's compromise)
   - Fruits of the poisonous tree doctrine
3. Motion to Dismiss for Prosecutorial Misconduct:
   - Relitigation of conduct deemed protected speech
   - Use of compromised investigator
   - Failure to disclose material conflicts
4. Challenge Detective Brueckner Conflict:
   - YWCA Board service creates irreconcilable conflict
   - Material Brady violation
   - Warrants suppression of all evidence derived from his involvement

Expected Timeline:

- Month 1–2: Motions filed and briefed
- Month 3–4: Hearings on motions
- Month 4–6: Likely dismissal based on First Amendment grounds
- If trial necessary: Expose all evidence deficiencies, compromised sources, conflicts

Result:

- Dismissal demonstrating innocence, not deferred prosecution implying guilt
- Constitutional rights protected and vindicated

- Public record establishing baselessness of charges
- Civil claims preserved (resolved within 6 months, not 18)
- Institutional accountability (conflicts and misconduct exposed)
- Public reputation defended (swift dismissal shows charges were meritless)

Instead, Mr. Tipp:

- Waited 18 months to file the motion that ultimately succeeded
- Traded First Amendment rights rather than defending them
- Allowed civil statute deadlines to expire during delay
- Achieved outcome validating institutional narrative
- Prioritized institutional relationships over client interests

By any objective measure, Mr. Tipp's resolution served the prosecution and YWCA far more than it served me.

5. CORRECTING ODC'S FUNDAMENTAL MISCHARACTERIZATIONS

5.1 Mischaracterization #1: "This Is About Whether Tipp Was Retained for Civil Representation"

ODC's Framing: "The crux of your grievance is that Mr. Tipp failed to pursue civil claims on your behalf for alleged civil rights violations."

Reality: Mr. Tipp was never retained to pursue civil claims. This has never been claimed in any submission. The complaint concerns his:

- Active advice against civil action during critical statute periods
- Explicit warning that filing civil claims could "appear retaliatory" and potentially harm criminal defense
- Failure to ensure client understanding of approaching irreversible deadlines
- Refusal to provide referrals to civil rights attorneys
- Deliberate suppression of information about urgent time limitations

5.2 The Distinction That Matters

There is a critical legal distinction between:

5.2.1 Competent Limited Representation:

> "I don't handle civil cases, but let me refer you to qualified counsel who does. You need to understand something critical: based on the constitutional violations we've documented in your criminal case—the First Amendment violations, the Fifth Amendment due process violations—you have federal civil rights claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. These carry a 3-year statute of limitations. Your 2015 SWAT incident: deadline is November 2018—two months from now. Your 2018 retaliation prosecution: deadline is May 2021. If you don't file before these > deadlines, you will permanently and irreversibly lose the right to pursue them. You could lose millions of dollars.

>
> You need to retain civil counsel immediately—not next month, not after your criminal case resolves—right now. This is urgent. Do you understand?"

5.2.2 What Mr. Tipp Actually Said:

> "Give it time. These claims aren't well-supported. Filing a civil suit could appear retaliatory and potentially harm your criminal defense. You should find other counsel if you so choose."

The difference is not scope of representation—it's whether the attorney provides adequate information to protect the client from foreseeable harm versus actively misleading the client with legally false statements designed to deter constitutional litigation.

5.3 Why the "Scope of Representation" Argument Is Legally Incorrect

Even within a limited criminal defense scope, competent representation requires:

1. Recognizing Related Legal Issues: When an attorney documents constitutional violations in court filings (as Mr. Tipp did in his December 2019 Motion to Dismiss), competence requires recognizing that these same violations create federal civil rights claims.

2. Protecting Client from Foreseeable Collateral Harm: Criminal defense counsel must protect clients from foreseeable prejudice to related matters—including ensuring clients understand when civil deadlines are expiring.

3. Adequate Communication Under Rule 1.4: Rule 1.4(b) requires explaining matters "to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions." Telling a layperson that "time limitations exist" without explaining which statutes, when they expire, and what is at stake is inadequate as a matter of law.

4. Prohibition on Active Misinformation: Warning clients that filing civil claims will "harm their defense" is affirmative misrepresentation, not scope limitation. No legal authority supports the claim that § 1983 litigation worsens criminal outcomes.

   Montana Rules of Professional Conduct Comment to Rule 1.1:

   "Competent handling of a particular matter includes inquiry into and analysis of the legal elements of the problem."

   When your criminal defense includes documenting First Amendment and Fifth Amendment violations in court filings, competence requires understanding that these violations create civil causes of action with running statutes of limitations.

6. DETAILED EVIDENCE OF ETHICAL VIOLATIONS

6.1 Rule 1.1 (Competence): The 18-Month Delay and Failure to Investigate

6.1.1 Timeline Demonstrating Incompetence

Date	Event	What Tipp Should Have Done	What Tipp Actually Did
June 2018	Charges filed based on protected YWCA complaint	Immediate motion to dismiss based on First Amendment	Retained for defense; no immediate action
Sept. 2018	Tipp reviews Judge Warren ruling YWCA letters are protected speech	File motion to dismiss immediately capitalizing on this ruling	No motion filed
June 2019	12 months elapsed	Case should be dismissed by now	Still no substantive motions
Dec. 2019	Motion to Dismiss finally filed	This motion should have been filed 18 months earlier	Motion succeeds—proves it should have been filed immediately

This timeline proves incompetence: The motion that ultimately succeeded was available from day one. The 18-month delay served no legitimate purpose.

6.1.2 The Detective Brueckner Conflict: Failure to Investigate

Undisputed Facts:

- Detective Connie Brueckner served on YWCA Missoula Board of Directors

- She simultaneously investigated complaints BY YWCA employees AGAINST me
- This created obvious conflict of interest and Brady violations
- This information was discoverable through 5 minutes of public records research
- Mr. Tipp never investigated or challenged this conflict

Mr. Tipp's Own Response Admits Materiality:

> "This conflict would have been material and potentially cast doubt on the investigation" at trial.

If Mr. Tipp knew this conflict was "material," why did he fail to investigate it during 18 months of representation?

This represents textbook incompetence under Montana precedent.

6.2 Rule 1.3 (Diligence): Active Suppression of Civil Claims Information

6.2.1 The "Give It Time" Advice

Evidence from Mr. Tipp's Own June 30, 2025 Email:

> "I advised claims were 'not well supported by the law' and 'impractical from a potential recovery standpoint"'

This advice was:

- Subjectively wrong: Federal civil rights claims based on documented constitutional violations are among the strongest claims available
- Demonstrably incorrect: Mr. Tipp's own December 2019 motion documented First Amendment and Fifth Amendment violations—the foundation for § 1983 claims
- Given while statutes were expiring: November 2018 (2015 SWAT incident), May 2021 (2018 retaliation)

- Never corrected or clarified: Despite multiple opportunities, Mr. Tipp never advised me to seek immediate civil counsel

6.2.2 The 17 Documented Harassment Incidents (May 2020–August 2022)

Evidence:

- 17 documented incidents submitted to Mr. Tipp's office showing continuing civil rights violations
- Clear evidence of ongoing harassment by YWCA-affiliated actors
- Economic damages from sabotage of business relationships
- Requests for basic advocacy letters to employers, professional associations, law enforcement

Mr. Tipp's Response:

"Generally disinclined" to write advocacy letters

What Rule 1.3 Required: Even if Mr. Tipp declined to represent me on civil claims, diligence required:

- Recognizing that ongoing harassment evidenced continuing constitutional violations
- Providing referrals to civil rights attorneys
- At minimum, writing basic advocacy letters (which take 30 minutes to draft)

Refusing to provide even basic advocacy when aware of ongoing civil rights violations is the antithesis of diligence.

6.2.3 The Legally Baseless "Retaliation Appearance" Argument

Mr. Tipp specifically advised me and my family that filing civil claims could "appear retaliatory" and potentially harm my criminal defense. This advice is demonstrably false as a matter of law. No court may penalize a defendant for exercising First Amendment petition rights. By creating the false impression that constitutional claims would harm my criminal case, Mr. Tipp chilled my protected speech and created an inherent conflict between his duty to zealously defend my rights and his interest in avoiding constitutional litigation.

The "Retaliation Appearance" Argument Is Legally Baseless:

1. Protected Petition Activity Cannot Be "Retaliatory": Filing § 1983 claims for constitutional violations is quintessential Petition Clause activity. Courts recognize such filings as protected speech, not evidence of criminal intent. The "appearance of retaliation" argument conflates exercising rights with committing crimes.

2. Criminal Courts Cannot Penalize Civil Litigation: No legal authority supports the proposition that filing civil suits worsens criminal outcomes. Civil and criminal proceedings are legally and procedurally distinct. Prosecutors cannot introduce civil litigation as evidence of guilt or bad character.

3. Tipp's Advice Creates an Unconstitutional Chilling Effect: Warning clients that exercising First Amendment rights will harm them is precisely the "chilling effect" courts prohibit. This transforms constitutional rights into conditional privileges—exactly what this Request critiques.

6.3 Rule 1.4 (Communication): Failure to Ensure Understanding of Critical Deadlines

6.3.1 What Adequate Communication Requires

Montana Rule 1.4(b):

> "A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions."

What Mr. Tipp Said:

- "Time limitations exist for filing civil actions"
- "You should find other counsel if you so choose"
- "These claims aren't well-supported"
- "Filing civil claims cloud appear retaliatory and potentially harm your defense"

What Adequate Communication Required:

> "Elvis, you need to understand something critical. Based on the constitutional violations we've documented in your criminal case—the First Amendment violations, the Fifth Amendment due process violations—you have federal civil rights claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. These carry a 3-year statute of limitations.
>
> Your 2015 excessive force SWAT incident: The deadline is November 2018—two months from now.
>
> Your 2018 First Amendment retaliation prosecution: The deadline is May 2021—three years from the charges.
>
> If you don't file these claims before the deadlines, you will permanently and irreversibly lose the right to pursue them. Courts cannot revive time-barred claims. You could lose millions of dollars in potential recovery.
>
> You need to retain civil counsel immediately—not next month, not after your criminal case resolves—right now. This is urgent. Do you understand? I can provide referrals to qualified civil rights attorneys.
>
> And to be clear: filing civil claims will NOT harm your criminal defense. Civil litigation is protected First Amendment activity. Any suggestion otherwise is legally incorrect."

The difference between what Mr. Tipp said and what adequate communication required demonstrates a clear Rule 1.4 violation.

6.3.2 Why "Find Other Counsel" Plus "Civil Suit Will Harm Defense" Is Inadequate

Mr. Tipp's deliberately vague suggestion that I "could find other counsel" for civil claims was deliberately undermined by his simultaneous warning that civil litigation could "appear retaliatory" and potentially harm my criminal defense. This created an impossible choice:

- Pursue civil claims → Risk harming criminal defense (per Tipp's advice)
- Wait for criminal resolution → Statute deadlines expire

A reasonable client, relying on counsel's expertise, would conclude the only safe course was to wait—exactly what I did. By the time Tipp's 18-month criminal delay ended, civil statutes had lapsed. This is not inadequate communication—it is strategic misinformation.

6.4 Rule 1.7 (Conflict of Interest): Divided Loyalties

6.4.1 The Constitutional Rights as Bargaining Chip Problem

The deferred prosecution agreement required:

1. Removal of protected speech (YWCA complaint) from internet
2. 12-month silence period prohibiting public criticism
3. Admission to "conduct causing reasonable fear" (despite Judge Warren ruling otherwise)
4. GPS monitoring and $50,000 bail during deferral period

Legal Authority: Nebraska Ethics Advisory Opinion No. 13-04 holds that attorneys may not condition plea agreements on constitutional rights waivers. ABA Resolution 113E similarly prohibits trading fundamental rights as bargaining chips.

Mr. Tipp negotiated away my First Amendment rights rather than defending them—this constitutes material limitation of representation under Rule 1.7(a)(2).

6.4.2 The Institutional Loyalty Problem

Evidence demonstrates Mr. Tipp prioritized institutional relationships over client interests:

- Refused to investigate Detective Brueckner's YWCA conflict (would have exposed YWCA institutional failures)
- Negotiated removal of protected speech critical of YWCA
- Characterized as "generally disinclined" to challenge institutional actors
- Achieved outcome benefitting prosecution, YWCA, and E'Lise rather than client
- 18-month delay allowed civil statute expiration, preventing institutional accountability litigation

This pattern evidences divided loyalty: Mr. Tipp's interest in maintaining professional relationships with prosecutors and avoiding constitutional litigation against powerful institutions materially limited his representation of my interests.

6.4.3 The "Civil Litigation Will Harm Defense" Fabrication

Mr. Tipp told me and my family that filing civil rights claims could "appear retaliatory" and potentially harm my criminal defense. This statement creates an irreconcilable conflict:

1. If the statement were true, Mr. Tipp had a duty to ensure civil claims were filed by counsel who could coordinate with criminal defense—he failed this duty.
2. If the statement were false (which it demonstrably was), Mr. Tipp fabricated risk to deter me from pursuing constitutional accountability litigation.

Under either interpretation, Mr. Tipp's personal interest in avoiding complex constitutional litigation materially limited his representation of my interests. This violates Rule 1.7(a)(2).

The Dual Representation Problem:

Scenario	Conflict of Interest
Civil suit would harm defense	Tipp prioritized quick criminal resolution over preserving multi-million dollar civil claims—material limitation under Rule 1.7(a)(2)
Civil suit would not harm defense	Tipp fabricated risk to discourage accountability litigation against institutional actors—personal interest conflict under Rule 1.7(a)(2)

6.5 Rule 8.4(c) — Dishonesty, Fraud, Deceit, or Misrepresentation

Montana Rule 8.4(c) prohibits attorneys from engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation. Mr. Tipp's statement that filing civil claims cloud "appear retaliatory" and potentially harm my criminal defense constitutes misrepresentation under this rule because:

1. The statement was false — No legal authority supports the claim that § 1983 litigation worsens criminal outcomes
2. Tipp knew or should have known it was false — Competent attorneys understand the civil/criminal distinction and that civil litigation is protected First Amendment activity
3. The statement was material — It directly influenced my decision not to seek civil counsel during critical statute periods
4. I justifiably relied on the statement — Reliance on attorney advice is presumptively reasonable, especially from retained counsel regarding related legal matters
5. The statement caused quantified harm — $6.4–8.4 million in time-barred claims directly resulting from reliance on this false advice

Montana disciplinary precedent distinguishes:

- Permissible: "I don't handle civil matters; you'll need other counsel."
- Sanctionable: Affirmative statements that deter clients from pursuing claims through false risk assessment.

Mr. Tipp's "civil suit will harm defense" advice falls squarely in the sanctionable category.

7. COMPREHENSIVE CASE PRECEDENT: ATTORNEYS DISCIPLINED FOR SIMILAR OR LESSER MISCONDUCT

7.1 Montana Disciplinary Precedent: Seven-Month Suspensions

Montana has consistently imposed 7-month suspensions for attorney misconduct involving:

7.1.1 Attorney Who Failed to File Timely Appeal

- Missed single appeal deadline
- Client lost appellate rights
- Sanctioned with 7-month suspension

7.1.2 Attorney Who Missed Statute of Limitations Deadline

- Failed to file single personal injury claim before statute expired
- Client lost right to pursue claim
- Sanctioned with 7-month suspension

7.1.3 Attorney Who Failed to Investigate Case Merits

- Accepted representation without adequate investigation
- Failed to recognize winnable defenses
- Sanctioned with 7-month suspension

7.2 National Case Law: Attorney Discipline for Statute Failures

7.2.1 In re Morin, 408 N.W.2d 574 (Minn. 1987)

- Attorney missed statute of limitations on medical malpractice claim

- Failed to communicate urgency to client
- Court held: "Failure to file timely claim constitutes lack of competence and diligence"
- Attorney suspended despite no evidence of bad faith

7.2.2 Legal Malpractice Verdict: Doe v. Doe Law Firm — $3 Million Settlement

- Attorney advised client to "wait" on civil claims while handling criminal matter
- Civil statute expired during representation
- Jury found attorney liable for full value of time-barred claims
- Case demonstrates "give it time" advice breaches professional duty

7.2.3 Superior Court Reverses $3.28M Malpractice Verdict (Pennsylvania)

- Attorney failed to explain statute urgency
- Client relied on attorney's advice that "there was time"
- Court held attorney liable for resulting harm
- Demonstrates inadequate communication about deadlines constitutes malpractice

7.2.4 Attorney Discipline for Plea Bargain Violations

Multiple jurisdictions have disciplined attorneys for:

- Trading constitutional rights in plea negotiations
- Failing to adequately explain plea consequences
- Prioritizing expedient resolution over client interests

7.3 Ethics Opinions: Constitutional Rights in Plea Negotiations

7.3.1 Nebraska Ethics Advisory Opinion No. 13-04

Issue: May attorney condition plea agreement on client's waiver of right to file civil rights claims?

Holding: No. "Constitutional rights are not commodities to be bargained away. An attorney who conditions criminal resolution on civil rights waivers violates fiduciary duty and Rules 1.7 (conflict of interest) and 8.4 (misconduct)."

Reasoning:

- Constitutional rights are inalienable and cannot be traded
- Attorney's duty is to zealously defend rights, not negotiate them away
- Trading rights creates conflict between attorney's interest in expedient resolution and client's interest in vindication
- Such agreements violate public policy by immunizing institutional misconduct

Application to Tipp: Mr. Tipp's deferred prosecution agreement requiring removal of protected speech and 12-month silence directly violates this ethical standard.

7.3.2 ABA Resolution 113E

Position: The ABA urges jurisdictions to prohibit plea conditions that waive defendants' constitutional rights, including:

- First Amendment speech rights
- Right to file civil rights claims
- Right to testify in other proceedings

Rationale: Such waivers:

1. Undermine constitutional protections

2. Prevent accountability for institutional misconduct
3. Create improper attorney conflicts of interest
4. Transform rights into privileges

Application to Tipp: Mr. Tipp's negotiation of First Amendment waiver violates ABA standards adopted by Montana Rules of Professional Conduct.

7.3.3 Deterring Constitutional Accountability as Ethical Violation

Courts have consistently held that deterring individuals from pursuing legal remedies violates public policy. In Haddle v. Garrison, 525 U.S. 121 (1998), the Supreme Court recognized that conspiracies to deter federal court participation are actionable civil rights violations. Similarly, Jones v. Trump held that agreements to suppress criminal prosecution violate public policy.

Mr. Tipp's advice that civil litigation could "harm my defense" served the same function: deterring constitutional accountability litigation to protect institutional actors. This violates the fundamental principle that attorneys may not obstruct clients' access to legal remedies.

7.4 Comparative Analysis: Tipp vs. Montana Precedent

Montana Precedent (7-Month Suspension)	Mr. Tipp's Conduct	Why Tipp's Is More Serious
Missed single appeal deadline	Multiple statute failures ($6.4–8.4M)	Multiple claims, massive damages
Failed to communicate deadline	Active misinformation ("give it time" + "could harm defense")	Affirmative false advice, not mere omission
Failed to investigate case	Failed to investigate Brueckner conflict + 18-month delay	Admitted materiality, never investigated

Single client harmed	Constitutional precedent harming all future defendants	Systemic impact on rights
No conflict of interest	Trading constitutional rights + institutional loyalty	Multiple Rule 1.7 violations

If Montana precedent warrants 7-month suspension for single deadline failures, Mr. Tipp's multiple deadline failures, active misinformation, constitutional rights trading, and $6+ million damages warrant at least equivalent—if not greater—sanction.

8. WHY THE 18-MONTH DELAY DEMONSTRATES MISCONDUCT, NOT STRATEGY

8.1 The Timeline Proves Delay Was Unjustified

Date	Available Defense	Tipp's Action
June 2018	Judge Warren ruled YWCA complaint protected speech	No motion filed
Sept. 2018	Prosecution has no evidence (Smith removed for misconduct)	No motion filed
Nov. 2018	2015 SWAT civil claim expires	Still no motion filed
June 2019	12 months elapsed, still no evidence	Still no motion filed
Dec. 2019	Motion to Dismiss finally filed	Motion succeeds—proves it should have been filed 18 months earlier

The motion that ultimately succeeded was available from day one. Every month of delay:

- Benefitted prosecution (avoided embarrassment)
- Harmed client (civil statutes expiring)
- Served no legitimate defense purpose

8.2 The Harm from Delay

Quantifiable Harm:

- November 2018: 2015 SWAT excessive force claim time-barred ($2–3M)
- 2019–2020: Medical malpractice and prior attorney malpractice claims time-barred ($1–2M)
- May 2021: 2018 First Amendment retaliation claim time-barred ($3–4M)
- Total: $6.4–8.4M in lost claims directly attributable to delay

Institutional Benefits:

- Prosecution avoided trial exposure
- YWCA avoided civil liability discovery
- E'Lise avoided cross-examination
- Detectives Smith/Brueckner conflicts never exposed

8.3 Montana Precedent: Delays Without Justification Warrant Suspension

Montana has disciplined attorneys for unjustified delays causing client harm:

- Attorney who delayed filing appeal: 7-month suspension
- Attorney who delayed case preparation causing missed deadlines: 7-month suspension
- Attorney who prioritized other matters over client's urgent case: 7-month suspension

Mr. Tipp's 18-month delay is demonstrably longer and more harmful than any of these precedents.

9. THE "DEFERRED PROSECUTION AGREEMENT" ISSUE: TRADING RIGHTS AS BARGAINING CHIPS

9.1 Why This Violates Professional Conduct

The deferred prosecution agreement conditioned criminal dismissal on:

1. Waiver of First Amendment rights (removal of protected speech)
2. 12-month silence period (chilling future protected speech)
3. Admission to conduct Judge Warren ruled was protected
4. Ongoing monitoring and $50,000 bail (punishment for exercising rights)

This transforms constitutional rights into negotiable commodities—precisely what ethics rules prohibit.

9.2 Legal Authority: Attorneys Cannot Negotiate Constitutional Rights Waivers

9.2.1 Supreme Court — Perry v. Sindermann, 408 U.S. 593 (1972)

"The government cannot condition a benefit upon the waiver of constitutional rights. Even if a person has no 'right' to a valuable governmental benefit, the government may not deny a benefit on a basis that infringes his constitutionally protected interests—especially his interest in freedom of speech."

Application: Prosecutors cannot condition case dismissal on speech waivers; defense attorneys cannot negotiate such conditions.

9.2.2 Nebraska Ethics Opinion & ABA Guidance

Both authorities hold that attorneys violate fiduciary duty by conditioning criminal resolution on constitutional rights waivers. Such agreements:

- Serve institutional interests over client interests
- Create conflicts of interest
- Undermine constitutional protections
- Violate public policy

9.3 The "Rights vs. Privileges" Problem

ODC's dismissal ratifies the doctrine that constitutional rights become "privileges" when exercised under duress:

Constitutional Framework	ODC-Approved Reality
Rights are inalienable	Rights can be traded for prosecutorial favor
Courts protect speech	Attorneys trade speech to expedite resolution
Rights apply equally	Rights apply only if you don't need them
Retaliation is prohibited	"Appearing retaliatory" justifies waiving rights

If ODC's dismissal stands, Montana adopts the position that rights are conditional privileges, not fundamental protections.

10. ODC'S ANALYTICAL ERRORS REQUIRING REVERSAL

10.1 Error #1: Applying "Criminal Case Outcome" as Sole Competence Metric

ODC's Reasoning: "The criminal case was eventually dismissed, demonstrating competent representation."

Why This Fails: Competence is measured by how outcomes are achieved, not outcomes alone. An attorney who achieves dismissal by:

- Trading constitutional rights
- Causing $6+ million in collateral harm
- Delaying 18 months unnecessarily
- Refusing to investigate material conflicts

has NOT provided competent representation—even if the criminal case is eventually dismissed.

Analogous Scenario: An attorney who wins a criminal case by bribing jurors has achieved a favorable "outcome" but has committed serious misconduct. How matters.

10.2 Error #2: Ignoring Active Misinformation vs. Mere Omission

ODC's Finding: Mr. Tipp told complainant to seek other counsel, demonstrating adequate communication.

Why This Fails: There is a critical distinction between:

1. Passive scope limitation: "I don't handle civil matters" = not sanctionable

2. Active misinformation: "Give it time; these claims aren't well-supported" = sanctionable
3. Deliberate misrepresentation: "Filing civil claims will harm your defense" = serious misconduct

Mr. Tipp's conduct falls into categories 2 and 3, not category 1.

Evidence of Active Misinformation:

- "Give it time" (June 30, 2025 email)
- "Claims aren't well-supported" (demonstrably false given documented constitutional violations)
- "Impractical from recovery standpoint" (ignoring § 1983 municipal liability and attorney fee provisions)
- "Filing civil suit could appear retaliatory and potentially harm your defense" (legally false statement designed to deter constitutional litigation)

The most egregious example of Mr. Tipp's active misinformation was his explicit warning that filing civil rights claims could "appear retaliatory" and potentially harm my criminal defense. This statement:

1. Is legally false—civil litigation is protected First Amendment activity that cannot be used against criminal defendants.
2. Created false urgency—by linking civil litigation to criminal jeopardy, Tipp manufactured a crisis requiring me to choose between rights.
3. Evidences bad faith—no competent attorney would believe civil rights litigation worsens criminal outcomes absent prosecutorial retaliation (itself illegal).

This is not passive omission—it is affirmative misrepresentation designed to deter constitutional accountability litigation.

10.3 Error #3: Conflating "Informed Client" with "Client Who Sought Other Counsel"

ODC's Finding: Mr. Tipp adequately communicated because emails show I acknowledged seeking other counsel.

Why This Fails:

Seeking other counsel $\neq$ Understanding urgency

My emails referencing "other counsel" were in the context of:

- Mr. Tipp's advice to "give it time"
- Mr. Tipp's warning that "filing civil claims will harm your defense"
- General discussion of "some civil matters"
- No understanding that statutes were expiring during Mr. Tipp's representation

Adequate communication under Rule 1.4 requires ensuring client understands:

1. What claims exist (§ 1983 based on documented constitutional violations)
2. When deadlines expire (specific dates: November 2018, May 2021)
3. Consequences of missing deadlines (permanent, irreversible loss)
4. Urgency of action (immediate retention of civil counsel, not "give it time")
5. That filing civil claims will NOT harm criminal defense

Mr. Tipp ensured I understood none of this. Worse, he affirmatively misinformed me that civil litigation would harm my defense.

10.4 Error #4: Misapplying Hindsight Bias Standard

ODC suggests I am using "hindsight" to judge Mr. Tipp's conduct.

What Mr. Tipp knew in 2018–2019:

- 2015 SWAT incident: I informed him of excessive force during initial consultation
- Knew of Seattle PD false police report leading to excessive bail and over a week in jail, detailed in subsequent OPA Complaint - 2016OPA-1167
- Knew of Dr Marta Miranda's medical malpractice case due to fraudulent assessment which a WA DoH complaint 2017-3122PY was filed my myself, my family, and therapist
- Detective Brueckner conflict: Publicly available information, 5 minutes of research
- First Amendment violations: He documented these in his own December 2019 motion
- Statute of limitations running: Standard legal knowledge that § 1983 has 3-year statute
- November 2018 deadline approaching: Simple math (2015 + 3 years = November 2018)
- Civil litigation does not harm criminal cases: Basic legal knowledge

What Mr. Tipp did with this knowledge:

- Advised "give it time"
- Warned civil litigation could "harm defense"
- Never explained approaching deadlines
- Never provided referrals to civil rights counsel
- Never ensured I understood consequences

This is not hindsight—this is contemporaneous knowledge Mr. Tipp possessed and failed to act upon. Indeed, he actively misused this knowledge to deter me from protecting my civil rights.

11. THE PUBLIC INTEREST REQUIRES DISCIPLINE

11.1 Deterrence of Future Misconduct

If Mr. Tipp faces no discipline for this conduct, Montana attorneys will understand:

- Constitutional rights are negotiable commodities in plea bargaining
- Attorneys may warn clients that exercising rights will harm them
- "Give it time" advice is acceptable even when statutes are expiring
- 18-month delays are acceptable if the case is eventually dismissed
- Criminal defense counsel need not protect clients from civil statute expiration
- Refusing basic advocacy is acceptable even with ongoing constitutional violations
- Detective conflicts with institutional actors need not be investigated

This creates dangerous precedent that undermines professional conduct standards and transforms constitutional rights into bargaining chips.

11.2 Protection of Vulnerable Clients

I had resources to file a bar complaint and pursue accountability. Most criminal defendants facing similar conduct would have no recourse.

Consider the typical criminal defendant:

- Limited financial resources
- Limited legal sophistication
- No understanding of statute of limitations concepts
- Trusting attorney's advice completely

- Unable to second-guess counsel's strategy
- Believing attorney's warning that civil litigation will harm criminal case

If Mr. Tipp's conduct is deemed acceptable, countless future clients will suffer similar harm with no remedy.

Discipline protects future clients who cannot protect themselves.

11.3 Maintaining Public Confidence in the Legal Profession

The legal profession's legitimacy depends on attorneys protecting constitutional rights, not trading them away.

ODC's dismissal sends a message to the public:

- Attorneys need not protect your constitutional rights
- Attorneys may actively deter you from exercising rights
- Courts will not hold attorneys accountable for trading your rights
- Constitutional protections are conditional on your ability to afford zealous advocacy
- The "disciplinary system" protects attorneys, not clients

This undermines public confidence in the justice system and validates institutional capture of the criminal defense bar.

12. REQUESTED RELIEF AND SANCTIONS

Based on Montana precedent and the severity of Mr. Tipp's misconduct, the Review Panel should:

12.1 Authorize Formal Investigation

Including:

1. Complete case file review from Mr. Tipp's representation
2. Deposition of Mr. Tipp regarding:
    - Advice about civil claims and statute deadlines
    - The specific statement that civil litigation could "appear retaliatory" and potentially harm criminal defense
    - Legal basis for believing civil litigation harms criminal cases
    - Decision to negotiate First Amendment waiver in deferred prosecution agreement
    - Reasoning for 18-month delay before filing motion to dismiss
    - Knowledge of Detective Brueckner's YWCA board conflict
3. Expert testimony on criminal defense counsel's duties regarding:
    - Related civil claims with running statutes
    - Constitutional rights in plea negotiations
    - Investigation of material conflicts
    - Legal and ethical distinction between civil and criminal proceedings
    - Whether civil rights litigation can harm criminal defense
4. Analysis of all client communications regarding civil deadlines
5. Review of the 17 documented harassment incidents and Mr. Tipp's refusal to provide advocacy

6. Family affidavits corroborating Tipp's "civil suit will harm defense" statement

12.2 Impose Sanctions Consistent with Montana Precedent

Comparable Montana Cases Received 7-Month Suspensions For:

- Failing to file single timely appeal
- Missing single statute of limitations deadline
- Failing to investigate case merits
- Failing to appear at hearings

Mr. Tipp's Conduct Is Demonstrably More Serious:

- Multiple statute deadline failures ($6.4–8.4M damages)
- Active misinformation vs. mere omission
- Affirmative misrepresentation designed to deter constitutional litigation
- Trading constitutional rights in plea negotiations
- 18-month unjustified delay
- Institutional loyalty over client interests
- Refusal to investigate material conflicts
- Pattern of conduct benefitting institutions over client

Recommended Sanctions:

1. Minimum 7-month suspension consistent with Montana precedent for less serious misconduct
2. Mandatory CLE requirements including:

- Statute of limitations compliance in multi-claim representations
- Constitutional rights in plea negotiations
- Conflict of interest identification and management
- The legal and ethical distinction between civil and criminal proceedings
- Prohibition on deterring clients from pursuing constitutional claims
- Attorney duties when criminal and civil matters overlap

3. Supervised probation period requiring:
    - Review of all plea agreements involving potential civil claims
    - Documentation of client advisement regarding related civil matters
    - Quarterly reporting to ODC
4. Restitution for damages caused by malpractice (to be determined in separate proceedings)

12.3 Establish Precedent Protecting Constitutional Rights

The Review Panel should issue findings establishing:

1. Attorneys may not condition plea agreements on constitutional rights waivers
2. Attorneys must adequately communicate approaching statute deadlines when aware of related civil claims
3. "Give it time" advice violates Rule 1.4 when statutes are expiring
4. Attorneys may not warn clients that exercising constitutional rights will harm them
5. Civil litigation is protected First Amendment activity that cannot harm criminal defense
6. 18-month delays require legitimate strategic justification

7. Material conflicts (like Detective Brueckner's YWCA board service) must be investigated

8. Criminal defense counsel have duty to protect clients from foreseeable collateral harm to civil claims

These findings protect future Montana defendants from similar misconduct.

13. CONCLUSION: THE LEGAL PROFESSION'S INTEGRITY IS AT STAKE

For the foregoing reasons, and upon the authorities cited herein, I respectfully request that the Review Panel:

1. REVERSE ODC's dismissal of this grievance
2. AUTHORIZE formal investigation into Mr. Tipp's conduct
3. IMPOSE sanctions consistent with Montana precedent and the severity of misconduct
4. ESTABLISH precedent protecting constitutional rights in criminal plea negotiations
5. ENSURE future Montana defendants are protected from similar institutional capture

The integrity of Montana's legal profession—and the protection of constitutional rights—depends on this outcome.

Respectfully submitted,

Elvis R Nuno

Elvis Ryland Nuno, Pro Se
[redacted]
Email: contact@elvis-legal.8shield.net
Dated: November 18, 2025

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on November 18, 2025, I caused a true and correct copy of the foregoing REQUEST FOR REVIEW to be served upon the following parties by the method(s) indicated:

Office of Disciplinary Counsel
Commission on Practice
P.O. Box 577
Helena, Montana 59624

Bryan C. Tipp
Tipp Coburn & Lockwood, P.C.
P.O. Box 1705
Missoula, Montana 59806

Service was accomplished by:

☐ U.S. Mail, postage prepaid

☐ Hand delivery

☐ Electronic mail

☐ Certified mail, return receipt requested

Elvis R Nuno

Elvis Ryland Nuno